

To whom it may concern:

I do not support the proposed psychology exam as 'one size fits all' does not apply across psychology disciplines. If psychology graduates do not possess a general skill set in applied psychology that enables psychology practice across a wide range of degree relevant workplaces by the end of the education, I suggest that the board invest their resources into improving the standard of postgraduate study in psychology, access to appropriate supervision and affordability of CPD.